National Severe Weather Warning Service

Chief Forecasters Assessment
A series of active frontal systems with strong to gale force winds for a time will move northeastwards across Scotland on Saturday and Sunday. These will bring bands of heavy rain to many areas with as much as 80 mm possible over high ground in parts of eastern Scotland through this period. Blizzards will occur over mountains at times.

The Met Office have issued an Amber Warning of Rain

Valid from 10:00 on Sat, 22nd Dec 2012 until 09:00 on Sun, 23rd Dec 2012

Further bands of heavy rain heavy rain accompanied by strong winds are expected to move northeastwards across Scotland during Saturday and Sunday. Given that the ground is already saturated, the public should be prepared for an increased risk of further localised flooding.
